The film's pion/trailer has placed itself in the story, the psychological test supersions write a notion of scrip/transmitted to read o Romance and complete a new answer. Other: You tell me what you want to do. Each project tells for 50 points and book questions (parts 1 and 2) buy the other 50 points for a total of 200 points. Create a pá'ster or movie trailer if Flowers for Algrenon becomes a movie, how can it be? Who would perform the main paps? Brainstorm in the following actors: ç à Å ç Charlie Miss Kinnian Dr. Strauss Dr. NEMUR Joe Frank Fanny - Create a colorful and appropriate movie pan'ster for your updated movie versions. You can draw your pan or create it on the computer. ç à Å ç If you prefer, you can create a book trailer video with at least 3-5 minutes of duration. You are a character! Å ç à Å ç Fighe that you accidentally fell asleep in the midst of "argenon sponsons", and will suddenly find yourself a character in the story! How would the author portray him? What would be his role in the story? Would you be a stupid or dynamic character? ç à Å ç Write a description of yourself as a character in this story. You can beautify the story with your addition to a story, but you must remain faithful to the plot as you know it today: Charlie is slow and has received an operation to improve your intelligence. Charlie is still the protagonist. You can make some predictions or predict with your story. Why do you do what you do? ç à Å ç In the start of the story, Charlie does some psychological tests. One is a Rorschach test, and another is a "fearful appearance test". These are two types of personality or psychological tests. ç à Å ç Your mission is creating a powerpoint (or presentation) in which you you these tests, in addition to two other psychological tests (four in total). Do people really believe that? Charlie had a rabbit's foot in his pocket for good luck, as he believed it would help him with the ink stain test. Historically, a rabbit's foot has been used as a good luck charm in many cultures. Create a power point of five superstitions (five slides) that people believe in. At least three of them must be from other countries, and one may be your own personal superstition. "Flowers for Algernon" is told from Charlie Gordon's point of view, as he grows in wisdom and intelligence. The story does not contain many dialogues or conversations, but descriptions of scenes and events as Charlie sees them and understands them. The scene must include at least one section of narrative and conversation between at least three characters. It should be written as a script, not as a dialogue, and have stage instructions so that another group of people can stage it. EXTRA! FLASH NEWS!! The presenters love to report all things exciting or new to the world. Bullshit Dr. Nemur and Dr. Strauss have agreed to talk to you, the leading reporter of LGMS, about their exciting discoveries in the world of science and intelligence. We are very curious to know what the whole test is and what will happen next. It is up to you. Write a news story or create a video stream telling you what's going on with Charlie Gordon right now, and what your predictions are for Charlie and Algernon's future. Do you think society will be pleased with the revelation that doctors are surgically changing people? Remember that this is expository, so what questions will we try to have answered? If you deal with the juvenile antics of the usual elements, a large ironic story, as seen through Little Eyes, with grace and aesthetic taste the way this sixth-generation filmmaker does, then it is possible to make the material feel slightly resonant, if it's not revealing. It's clear that adding a dose of high expectations from Dickens into the mix doesn't hurt, what the director and his script collaborator, Ni Lao, do in the form of introducing a fugitive killer (Wang Ziyi) hiding on the other side of Woods around the middle of the movie. Until then, we mostly follow 11-year-old Wang Han (Liu Wenqing), as he plays with his school friends, listens to his painter father (Wang Jinchun) stand on the importance of art and find a- his own way and begs his mother for a brand-new white shirt. Once the killer begins to trust the boy's kindness, all that boy's things begin to face a taste of purpose. When the inevitable loss of innocence occurs, we are not surprised, nor if there is thanks to the filmmaker with the able-hand – we feel that we have been improperly touched for an otter. Follow David Fear on Twitter: @davidlfear Welcome to 'Episode 67 (Part II of V) ', where we will be unpacking the first half of Daniel Keyes' novel Flowers for Algernon.Report: March 2, the successes we had With Algernon, and with much deliberation, I officially chose our first research subject. Charlie Gordon, 32, was recommended by Alice Kinian of Beekman School for Retarded Adults and she assured us of her desire to increase her intellect. I scheduled Charlie to go to the lab in the next few days when Burt Seiden would conduct some preliminary psychological tests. We will also test your mental flexibility with some labyrinth puzzles with Algernon. All that remains is the consent of a family member to grant permission for the According to Alice Kinian, her sister f Norma can be the most appropriate person to out. Providing there are no warning signs during the testing, and consent is provided, we will be on the cusp of something truly ground-breaking. All these years of hard work will be vindicated and the trust of my wife and those who fund me will have been justified. Dare I say it, I might be remembered amongst the pantheon of great scientists.Strauss has insisted that we keep a close eye on his mental state and emotional growth. I am inclined to agree but feel we cannot be held fully accountable for the man's personality. The success or failure of this experiment will rest on his increased intelligence, or lack thereof.
